

As the sun set across the colossal land, a monstrous creature known as a volcano elegantly waited to disrupt joy for the people in the city below. For years this volcano was in a deep dark sleep but tonight it chose to reveal its true self. The potent smell filled the air with a revolting stench of rotten eggs and the taste of ash. Spontaneously, the gargantuan volcano spat invisible, blazing lava from its mouth. While the crazy molten lava gull from the volcano's spout, the residents were trying to pack as many things as they could and then run for their life. As rocks were falling off the cliffs, smoke was smothering the land. The cracked, broken slopes shook from the vibrations of the eruption. This made large rocks fall on to innocent people and their houses below. The growling devil continued to growl and burst with lava.

