

As the trees snapped and another part of the forest was gone the ground groaned of storm rages. Ah Kin Mai, the duke of the village, sat and looked at his weather calendar he groaned "not even a single root this year". Yum Kaax, the god of nature, was clearly ignoring earth and its nature "but with no nature comes with no grain and with no grain are people will struggle to survive."

Away from the village, a boy called Tommy was playing roving with his friends "Yes I win again!" He boated as he fell down onto the floor.

At that moment, the weather changed the ground started to shake and then a loud deep voice could be heard from all around the country. "HOW COULD SUCH A WEAK PERSON BE SO RUDE!" Tommy looked up he trembled in fear. After the clouds moved it revealed the face of Yum Kaax. "I was only talking about me beating my friends is a pee!" Tommy exclaimed. But what I wish to tell you is that if I was you I'd make the fruits grow. The God stared silently. "The shall we play a game. Let us have a race if I lose then the fruits will grow however if I win you will become my servant in paradise forever." After that the god left away.

Later that day, "Mother Tommy exclaimed. "Please help me" Tommy begged. "It was foolish of you to challenge a god. I can't help you she began but others will. At the break of dawn, he went searching in the remaining bits of the forest and in the corner of
