

The Midnight Fair

When the dark, gloomy moon rose over the fair, it became silent until two moons sneaked to the light switch and lit up the place. Hypnotised by the lights, there were squirrels, foxes, wolves and bears. One of the squirrels chomped a hole through the fence but a chucky fox ran and bit his bum. All the animals rushed in jumping on each other and fighting through there way in.

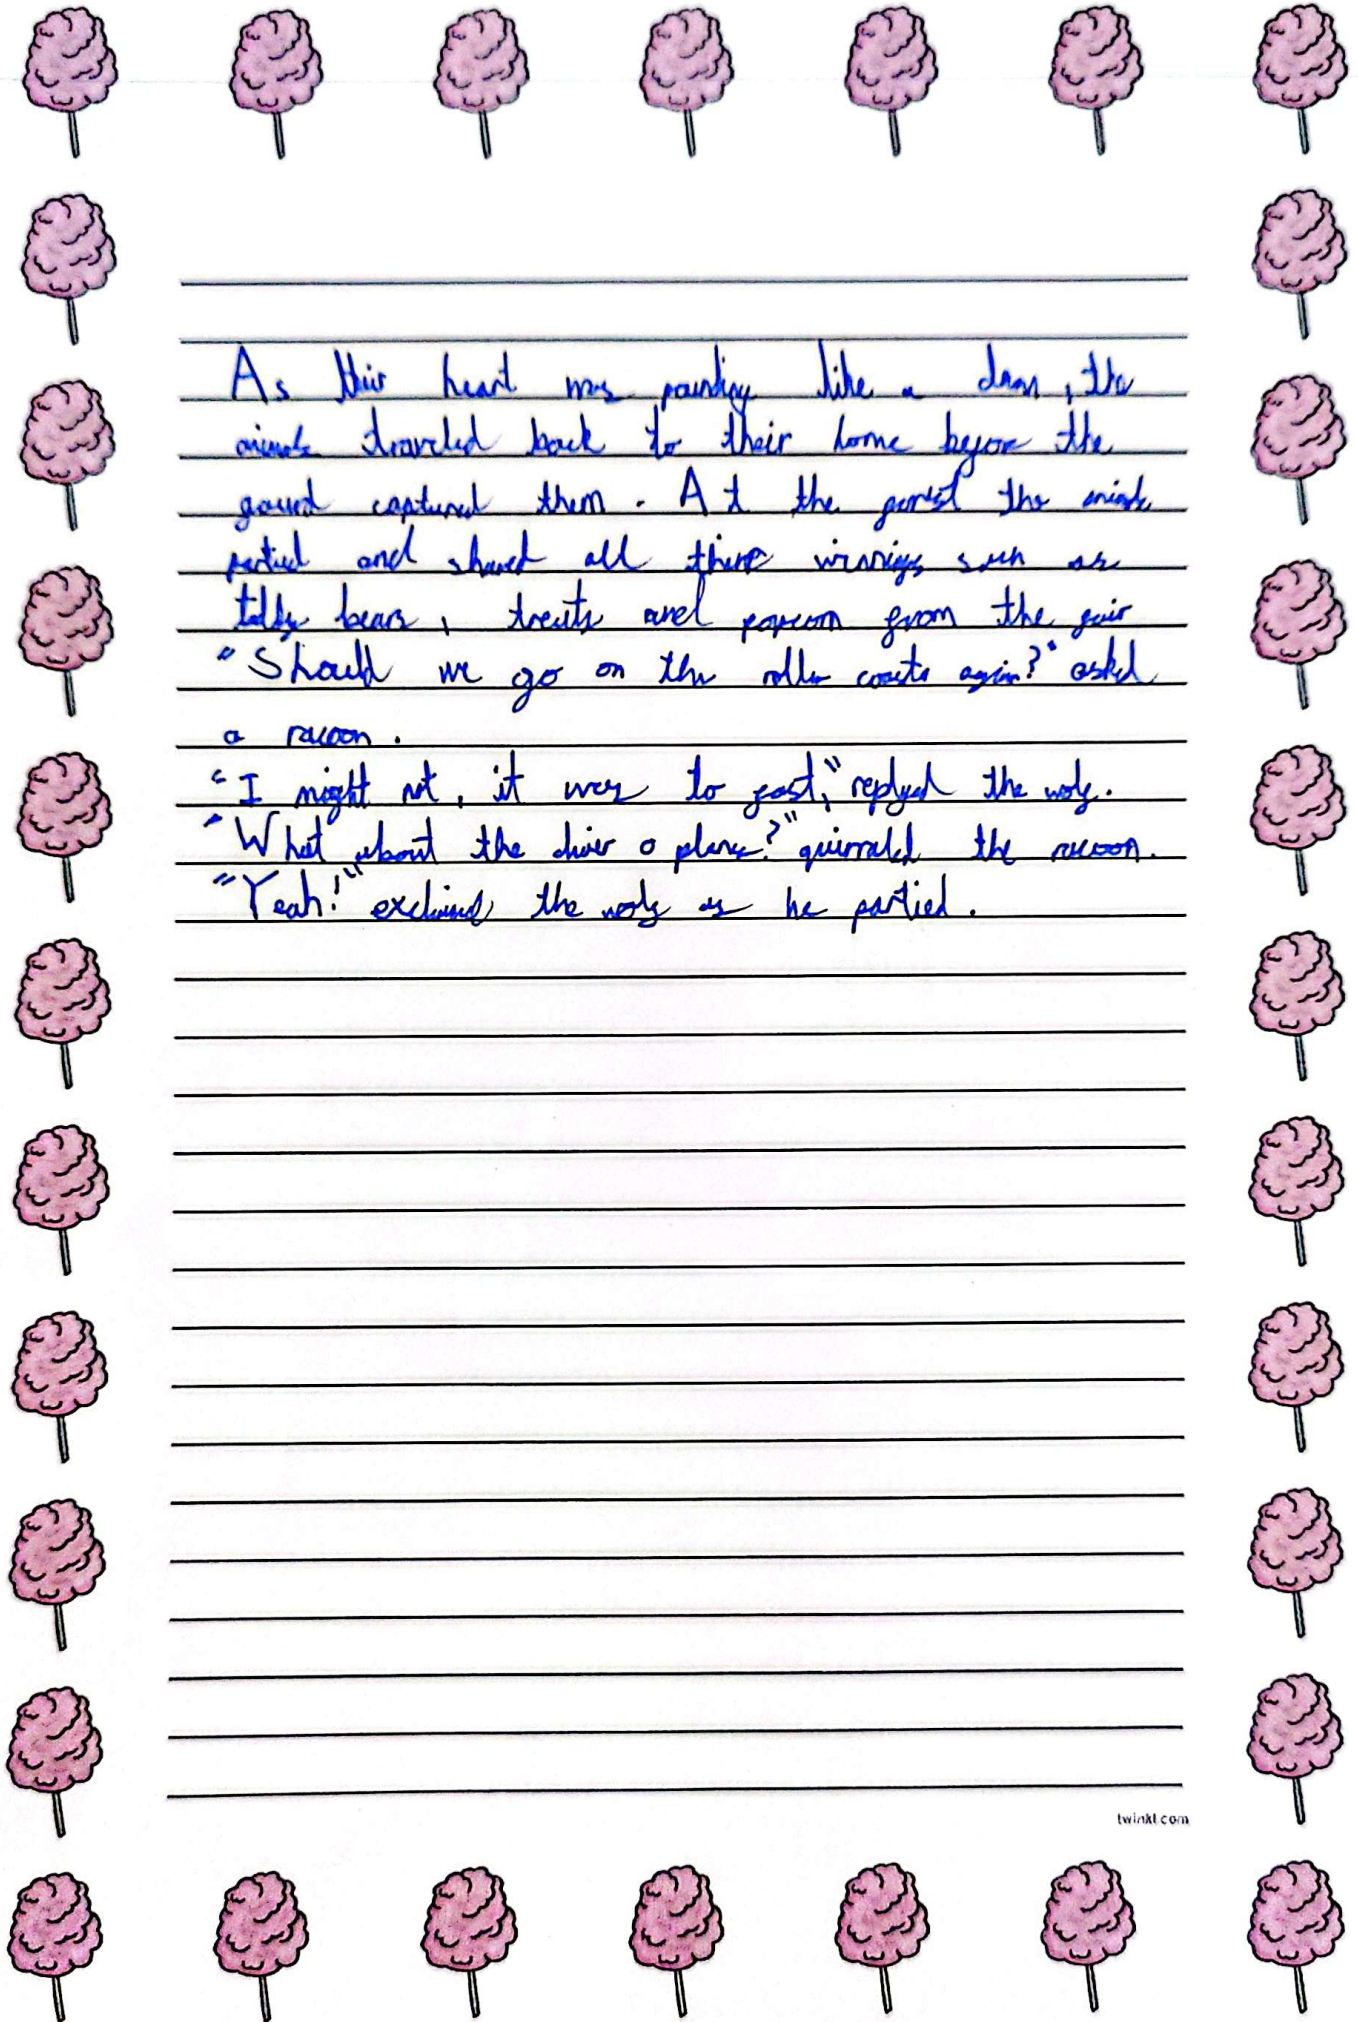

As the animals headed to the thrilling roller coaster, they veined the stalls of the sweet, sugary donuts and the gaudiest rides but they were eager for a trip on the coaster. Straight away, the racoons encouraged everyone to ride the roller coaster and sat on the front seat, the back. After the ride, they all felt like they were going to vomit because that was the gaudiest ride there.

Then, they rushed to the entrance of chair a place and galloped to the ginormous swings that swung like a roundabout. When they were hungry they devoured churros, sausage rolls and scrumptious popcorn from the snack bar. After their feast, they felt full up because they ate so much good.

As his heart was pounding like a drum, the mice scurried back to their home before the guard captured them. At the forest the mice parted and shared all their winnings such as tummy bears, treats and popcorn from the fair.

"Should we go on the roller coaster again?" asked a mouse.

"I might not, it was too fast," replied the wolf.

"What about the chair o' plane?" quizzed the mouse.

"Yeah!" exclaimed the wolf as he parted.
