

Lily

"Shut up you maggots!"

The petrifying sound came from Miss Higgings' high pitched voice and echoed through the line of scared children. They immediately stopped silently as if they knew what would happen next. Miss Higgings stood for what felt like five minutes scanning her next victim. Her sharp ears caught the sound of a terrified child whispering "She is scary!" The teacher pointed at the child and loomed down like a monster gritting his yellow teeth.

"Say that again Mia Hogsbottom!" sneered Miss Higgings, as her voice echoed through the assembly hall. "Say it all day actually!" "but don't worry though my dear!" She added softly. "I suppose if you said it then I will allow it today." "On the speaker 100 times!" Miss Higgings bellowed. And with that Miss Higgings lead the petrified student to the speaker.

A student called Lily unlike Miss Higgings was a kind hearted six year old who always managed to make a smile on other children's faces. Lily had light and pretty blonde hair and also had blue glasses which helped her innocent eyes see from far away. However Lily hated one particular person it was Miss Higgings. Lily just hated the way Miss Higgings stormed in the room so she decided it was time for revenge!

Only yesterday, Lily was about to paint but then she remembered that she needed a paint brush. She then just said "I would like a paint brush." Next she was about to get it when she looked behind her. Then she saw the paint brush! Lily was shocked it wasn't there before or was this just her imagination?

As Miss Higgings finished her job and was looking ever so proud, Lily began to form a sentence inside her brain. Lily kept frantically thinking what to do. She had an idea.

Lily whispered, this "I would like super strength please." Suddenly she walked to the stage and threw Miss Higgings out the window! Slowly at first, the orange hair as bright as Ginny Weasley's disappeared. Eventually, she was gone and all the students jumped up and down clearly not missing Miss Higgings one bit. Finally the headmistress that pulls your hair! Mia Hogshottom was particularly retired. Revenge had been served! About two weeks later there came an announcement that Lily's favourite teacher Miss Andrew had become headteacher of the school.
