Pancake Pandemonium

1.50 pence

The town of Serve and Eat, in South Australia, has had a massive mixup with their town. For the last one hundred years the weather has been deliciously, mouthwateringly good however over the last couple of months, the weather has changed to be really, dangerous. Food arriving from the sky has become hazardous and fatal. Still, no one can explain the weather but lots of people are saying to leave the town of Serve and Eat.

It all started when a gargantuan amount of cheese fell from the sky causing the town in smelly cheese.

After a while, violent storms of gigantic chocolate bars was falling from the sky, meaning the people in the schools were being forced to stay inside. Soon after, a tsunami of upside down pineapple cake.

The mayor was becoming horrified because so many sausage and onion sandwiches were falling at eighty miles per hour. Next, a load of a hundred inches of ice cream fell all in one day and seasoning burned people's eyes. "We ate ourselves sick on sausage and onion sandwiches," chatted a resident. "I don't want to live here anymore," exclaimed a resident. "I think I want to hide from the onions because the onions are burning my eyes," derided other residents. "The whole world is covered in onion and sausage sandwiches" explained a resident.

With such evil weather, all the big men are having to clean up all the good that fell in the sky. They can not deal with all this good. The residents of Sene and E. at have made a decision to abandon the town. But where will they go?
