

The Journey

Yesterday wasn't any different than any other tedious day. I was feeling extremely bored as my ENTIRE family were acting like I was invisible - even the dog! I hauled my body around the sad, quiet, lonely house just looking for ONE thing to do - but no luck. Since there was NO luck AT ALL I decided to go to my dull, dark bedroom to sulk until dinner. I soon found an old, shiny, golden crayon from when I was about two. So I perked up enough courage and drew a staircase on the WALL. I knew my mum would be fuming but at least she will pay attention to me. But then I realised the staircase became real. Where does this lead? I thought to myself.....

The next thing I knew I was walking up the staircase. It came to a wooden door, so I cautiously opened the door waiting for something revolting. But what I saw next was beyond fun it was extraordinary. There were clusters of people queuing for amusing rides. IT WAS A.M.A.Z.I.N.G! I went on this ride called Log Lob and it was epic.

I felt really delighted. I noticed my golden crayon was still in my pocket so I drew a MEGA pegasus and hopped on....

Flying up and up into the clouds, the view was fantastic - I couldn't believe my eyes. I took a moment to reach down and touch the cotton, cosy clouds it felt like the worlds fluffiest blanket.
But then all my hope disappeared out of thin air. Pegasus accidentally dropped me and I thought I was DOOMED but with my quick thinking, I took my trusty golden crayon and drew an expanded, colorful parachute and I slowed down. Then Pegasus managed to get me back to the clouds.
THAT WAS THE SCARIEST DAY OF MY LIFE! I thought to myself.

Once I was back on the clouds, Pegasus was captured. I was panicing so I decided to save him. I set off to rescue Pegasus and I found him.

he was trapped in a secured, iron cage. My heart was pounding, as I fiddled with the lock, I was shaking. Finally Pegasus was free I was beaming. Soon I drew friendship bracelets and we played on the cotton, cosy clouds.
