

Journey

Yesterday was the worst day ever. I was feeling lonely and bored as everyone in my house was ignoring me - as usual. Feeling sad, I strolled through the house looking for something to do. I picked up a purple crayon and drew a door. When I finished, I was so surprised to see it was a real, purple door! "Where will this take me?" I asked myself.

Cautiously, I turned the handle and walked through the door into an empty, calm beach. Between the sea and the sky, stood me in awe how this happened. Everywhere I looked, it was empty. I sat me, alone on this beach in the middle of nowhere. After a while, I drew a purple, realistic verpa between the yellow, crisp sand and the crystal clear ocean.

All of a sudden, I ended up in a busy, beautiful city where I could see tall, towering skyscrapers and big, huge blimps in the dark, beautiful night sky. People greeted me kindly. Never in my life had I been treated like this.

I drew a door and it took me to a forest. I walked in the forest for a while and then I took a rest. A for some time, I continued my adventure and then I saw something glowing and glistening. I walked towards it to see it was a portal! I went through the portal and to my surprise, I ended up somewhere else. I immediately, I saw someone with a crayon too! Utterly joyous, I walked up to him and we became inseparable, best friends.